

Happy New Year!

AI generated image using Adobe Firefly

I wish you a whole new year of wonderful Photogenealogy discoveries.

Thank you for your continuing interest in Photogenealogy.

Talks

My first year of providing Photogenealogy talks was both exciting and gratifying. The feedback has been extremely encouraging and included the following comment:

"I have watched many presentations on organising photos and found this to be by far the clearest and easiest to understand. Ann has made the whole process seem logical and achievable."

This year I have two return talks booked for the Family History Society of Cheshire and the Wanaka Genealogy Group in New Zealand, and two first-time talks booked for the West Middlesex Family History Society and the Queensland Family History Society in Australia.

Book

My Photogenealogy book is progressing nicely, even though it is still in the early planning stages. I will share information about progress in subsequent newsletters.

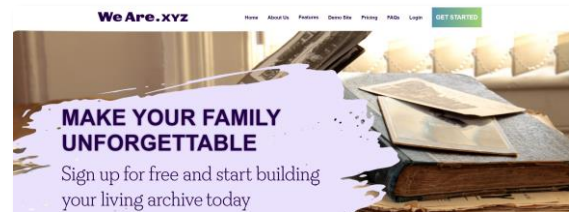

Watch this space!

Articles

I've written two new articles; the first about preparing your family history prints for scanning, and the second about preserving these prints after scanning them. They will appear in the March & April Issues of UK Family Tree magazine.

Suggestions for you!

We Are.xyz

The lovely people at We Are.xyz have been very busy recently. Any metadata already in your photos will now be preserved on upload and some can be edited within the platform. I'm looking forward to exploring this new feature...

Projectkin

If you haven't already, I recommend a visit to the Projectkin website, where you will find "A community of family historians hooked on stories."

And finally...

...worth a browse if you have the time: "From Lab to Lens" from the Science & Media Museum.

I'd love to hear how you are getting on with your photogenealogy project...let me know via my website or Twitter/X.

Ann